Test your apostrophe knowledge! Put the apostrophes where they belong.

1. I attended that university in the 80s.
2. We know their childrens ages, but thats about it.
3. Maybe its me, but I do think we have an issue.
4. We hoped to be moved in two months time.
5. Did she get her drivers license today?

6. I went back to get my brothers books from their teachers.
7. I received my masters in 2005.
8. He was sitting on the passengers side.
9. I did give two weeks notice.
10. It was Presidents Day, so the office was closed.

11. She cant see that well.
12. We would of loved to have gone, but we werent invited.
13. He was micd up for the game.
14. Her shoulder had to be MRI'd.
15. Thats a whole nother story, sir.

16. Her ts are crossed higher on the letter, indicating confidence.
17. The tenants neglected to give 60 days notice of termination, so we kept the security deposit.
18. Workers comp insurance is expensive, but its also worth it.

Move the apostrophes to the correct place in the word, or remove them altogether.

1. We moved to the Dakota's.
2. On it's face, this is a frivolous complaint.
3. We are not discussing John's in general, we are only talking about you.
4. We received a Seasons' Greetings card from him.
5. New Yorker's are just that rude, I've found.

6. We were only allowed to smoke at her house, not at her parent's house.
7. We knew that the fence was their's.
8. We did purchase homeowner's insurance.
9. He say's he didn't go, but he definitely wasn't home.
10. Including all of the LPN's and RN's, we had thirty nurses on staff.
11. Despite the efforts of his counselor's, he ended up spending time in the county boy's home.
12. We did see her, but only at the nurse's station.